031372 BOULTON PAUL DEFIANT (PART 1) by Listermann, Thomas & Laird. Turret equipped fighters became operations with the RAF during World War Two as the result of Britains ongoing concern about the threat of German aerial attacks following the devastation wrought in WW1. In the 1930s a fighter with a gun turret was considered to be an effective way of attacking bombers. The result was the Defiant. After a promising start during the Battle of France it was withdrawn from day operations after heavy losses during the Battle of Britain. This first volume is dedicated to its development as a day fighter. 48pp 35 b/w photos, 4 colour profiles 5 12.99
